GENDER INCLUSION

Women are a particularly vulnerable group that, due to cultural restraints, are difficult to integrate into migratory beekeeping. We have recruited a few female beekeepers who have become quite successful. They are able to migrate full time because their husband or brother is also a beekeeper.

We incorporate other women into our microenterprise candle and beeswax programs. to assist with income generation.

Since 2013, Plan Bee has trained 143 women (204 people in total) on production and business literacy. This training has provided a significant source of alternative income for them.

BEEKEEPER TRAINING

In 2015, we trained interested and vulnerable people to become commercial beekeepers. Each trainee received one-on-one training and 20 beehives. From 2018-2019, we did advanced beekeeping training by experts from Israel, Vietnam, and the International Trade Centre (ITC).

Plan Bee trains beekeepers in using standardized approaches against diseases and pests using safe medicines. We taught beekeepers how to correctly administer, record and follow strict standards to improve bees' health and increase their lifespan. This leads to higher market prices for honey.

We have been piloting digital and paper-based systems. to receive data from the beekeepers on bee health, location, production, and numbers. Mapping data enables us to see trends and inform beekeepers of any changes.

Some beekeepers now offer farm pollination services to generate another income stream.

YOUTH

Plan Bee actively employs, supports and trains youth in beekeeping and microfinance, with some now working in our educational centre and factory.

We trained more than 22 women from the age of 18 years with only a middle school education and limited job opportunities. Over a five-year-period, using strong mentorship, knowledge sharing, and training, these women have become experienced and confident.

Four women work full time with us and three are part time. We look forward to recruiting more young women as our business grows.

APITOURISM

In Shan State, beekeeping is becoming more of an established agriculture practice. At our educational centre, we enjoy showing tourists, school children, university students, town and rural people the value of bees for people and the environment.

Our hands-on tour emphasizes the fascinating features of bees. There are bee suits for people to wear, honey extractors to spin, and honey to taste. Our training centre is run by ethnic women beekeepers who are trained to communicate and demonstrate the value of bees.

We have also supported other agribusiness NGOs to support pollination and inspire farmers and others to work in the bee industry.
